Defining Characteristics of Collaboration*

- Collaboration is voluntary. People cannot be forced to use a particular style in their interactions with others.

- Collaboration requires parity among participants. Each person’s contribution is equally valued, and each person has equal power in decision-making.

- Collaboration is based on mutual goals. Professionals do not have to share all goals in order to collaborate, just one that is specific and important enough to maintain their shared attention.

- Collaboration depends on shared responsibility for participation and decision-making. Collaborators must assume the responsibility of actively engaging in the activity and in the decision-making it entails.

- Individuals who collaborate share resources. Sharing resources of time, knowledge, and materials can enhance the sense of ownership among professionals.

- Individuals who collaborate share responsibility for outcomes. Whether the results of collaboration are positive or negative, all participating individuals are responsible for the outcomes.
